Children Insurance	$137.86	n/a
Time-Sharing Schedule	162	203

276. For the period during which he will be paying durational alimony, JEREMY TRASK, as Obligor, shall be obligated to pay child support to KEARIE TRASK, the Obligee, in the amount of $312.76 per month for the two children (from August 1, 2020 until August 1, 2023). The pro rata percentage share for this period will be 48% Mother, 52% Father.

277. When durational alimony ends, child support will increase, and beginning September 1, 2023 shall be $555.09 for two children (note: at that time, the pro rata percentage share will also shift to 41% Mother, 59% Father).

278. When the eldest ages out, child support will reduce to $382.39 per month.

279. Prospective child support shall be payable in accordance with Obligor's employer's payroll cycle (see installments above), and in any event at least once a monthly beginning August 1, 2020 and continuing for so long as support is in effect.

280. Arrearage: In accord with Florida Statutes 61.30(17), the court has discretion to award child support retroactive to the date when the parents did not reside together in the same household with the children not to exceed a period of 24 months preceding the filing of the petition.

281. As discussed at trial, this discretion presented the Court with an interesting conundrum.

282. Neither petition requested arrears calculation earlier than the date of filing. Typically, the Magistrate will restrict relief to that which is actually plead for, regardless of her "discretion" to do otherwise. See J.L.B. v. S.J.B. 135 So.3d 468 (Fla. 5thDCA 2014).[48]

283. However, the Joint Stipulation identified incomes and expenses – and most significantly credits due to Mr. Trask – dating back to 2017. The credits, in particular, are presented in "lump sum" fashion ($17,912.00 from approximately August 2017 (per testimony) – January 2020), making it impossible for the Magistrate to determine how much of the credit was acquired prior to the 5.31.19 date of filing, and how much of it came after.

284. This, in turn, indicates that the parties had no intention of such a cut off being imposed, and went into trial having negotiated partial settlement of the issue of child support arrears (specifically, offsets for payments made) that encompassed a period reaching all the way back to 2017, no matter what the petitions said.

285. As noted above, the Magistrate expressly asked the parties if they understood the stipulation. Both said yes. The Magistrate finds that the existence of the signed stipulation, and more specifically its contents, indicate this issue to be tried by consent.

48 "Because Former Husband did not plead for retroactive child support in his December 2011 supplemental petition and the issue was not tried by consent, we decline to hold that the trial court abused its discretion in calculating the retroactive child support due." Granted, there is some distinction, as the J.L.B. case was a modification, rather than an initial determination (so 61.30(17) was not in play), but the idea of a pleading being necessary is still persuasive.

286. The lookback shall therefore go to 24 months preceding the date of filing, which would bring us to 5.31.17.

287. Since the parties marriage did not actually break down, per their testimony, until July 15, 2017, that is the date which will be used (which, for clarification, would put the first of the month following – or August 1, 2017 – as the start date for arrears).

288. In this evaluation, the court shall consider the guidelines that would have been in effect at the time (as demonstrated by the parents' actual incomes) and all actual payments made and accepted between the parents.

289. If there is no such evidence, then for an initial determination Florida Statute 61.30(17)(a) indicates that the Court can use the obligor's income "at the time of the hearing" in looking back to assess retroactive support.

290. Here comes the chart again, this time with additional information for alimony and other expenses.

291. It is noted that the temporary alimony award – which is being awarded retroactively – must also be accounted for as well. That changes the incomes in the worksheet slightly, as so indicated.

292. In addition, Ms. Trask is stipulated to have credit due for daycare as follows:

a. 2017: $1,727.00
b. 2018: $4,219.00
c. 2019: $5,178.08
d. 2020 (through August 1): $946.00[49]

293. As noted in the alimony section, the way this was included was by average of the three years (2017 – 2019) and dividing that by 12 months to get an "average" monthly number. To put it frankly, it was simply easier math this way, and any discrepancy is deemed harmless in the grand scheme of things.

294. It was further agreed that Mr. Trask has been paying insurance for the children. The number testified to at trial and identified in stipulation was $137.86. There was no indication that number has changed in recent years, and only one number was provided to the Magistrate.

295. Similarly, there was no evidence of any change to the parties' individual insurance costs. Under the same theory of 61.30(17)(a), the current amounts for insurance/daycare will be used in all the charts, since the parties did stipulate that payments were so made.

296. Finally, excepting 2017 (which was a year in which Mr. Trask had no substantial overnights) the 203 (56%) for Ms. Trask, and 162 (44%) for Mr. Trask schedule will be used, as it approximates the voluntary plan.

49 The lower figure is due to Covid and the school year cutting short.

297. This results in several different worksheets, all of which are attached, the summation of which is as follows:

a. For 2017, the monthly amount was $1,195.93. There were 5 months at issue. $1,195.93 x 5 = $5,979.65
b. For 2018 from January – July, the monthly amount was $1,057.38. There were 7 months at issue. $1,057.38 x 7 = $7,401.66
c. For 2018 from August – December, the monthly amount was $345.16 (due to the change in time-sharing schedule). 5 months are at issue. $345.16 x 5 = $1,725.80.
d. For 2019, from January – May, the monthly amount was $500.40. 5 months are at issue. $500.40 x 5 = $2,502.00.
e. For 2019, from June – December, the monthly amount adjusts to $354.48 (due to the award of temporary retroactive alimony). 7 months are at issue. $354.48 x 7 = $2,481.36.
f. In 2020, there were 7 months leading up to trial. As noted Mr. Trask is paying $600.00 monthly in alimony for this period, which was accounted for in the calculation. $312.76 x 7 = $2,189.32

298. The sum of the forgoing is $22,279.79.

299. It is therefore found that as of August 1, 2020 there is a child support arrearage in the amount of $22,279.79 owed by JEREMY TRASK to KEARIE TRASK. Offsetting the $17,912.00 the parties stipulate to have been paid by Mr. Trask during the period in question yields balance of $4,367.79 in arrears owed.

300. The Clerk of Court is therefore ORDERED to indicate in the SDU record that as of August 1, 2020 the child support arrears balance owed by the Obligor JEREMY TRASK to Obligee KEARIE TRASK is $4,367.79.

301. There is no statutory or precedential authority for lump sum child support.[50] In accord with Florida Law, the arrearage installment is usually equal to 20% of the prospective support payment, but in this case the Magistrate recommends and installment of $50.00 per month given the Obligor's other obligations.

302. The arrearage installment will be payable with the prospective support payment commensurate with the pay cycle of the Obligor (or at least once monthly) until such time that the arrearage is paid off, in full.

303. Termination of Prospective Support Entitlement: Support entitlement for each qualifying child will continue until each child turns 18 or until their graduation from high school, as long as graduation occurs before their 19th birthday.

304. Should a child become self-supporting, marry, or die, then support for that child shall terminate.

305. It is noted that the health insurance obligation and the life insurance obligation (if any so ordered) terminate upon the child's aging out of support.

306. Any arrearage amount due and owing shall survive the termination of prospective support and is potentially collectible under creditor/debtor remedies and subject to statutory interest.

50 Masnev v. Masnev, 253 So.3d 638 (Fla. 4th DCA 2018).

307. Form of Payment of Child Support: Florida Statutes 61.1301(1)(a) states that "upon entry of an order…for child support, or for alimony and child support…the court shall enter a separate order for income deduction if one has not been entered…Copies of the orders shall be served on the oblige and obligor. If the order…directs that payments be made through the depository, the court shall provide to the depository a copy of the order…If the oblige is a recipient of Title IV-D services, the court shall furnish the Title IV-D agency a copy of the income deduction order."

308. The Obligor shall pay child support payments by Income Withholding Order (IWO).

309. In the event that information about the obligor's employer is currently unavailable then until such time as an IWO can be processed the Obligor shall make all child support payments directly to the State Disbursement Unit, indicating on the payment the instant case number.

310. The Obligor shall be solely responsible for all costs/fees associated with processing of the support payment, which are assessed per installment.

311. Payment information can be found online at: https://www.myorangeclerk.com/Divisions/Family/Children-Support

312. It is noted that the Obligor may pay off the child support arrearage balance at any time. Such payments shall be made to the State Disbursement Unit to ensure they are credited from the balance due and owing.

313. Life Insurance Security: The Obligee could not offer present evidence as to the reasonable availability of life insurance to the Obligor, nor of ability to pay said premiums. Therefore, until further order of the court there shall be no life insurance security obligation placed upon either parent.

314. Enforceability of Child Support: Child support obligations are enforceable by contempt of court remedy.

315. Modification of Child Support: Both parents have the duty to contribute equitably to the support of their children[51] Each parent's duty of support continues during the marriage and after its dissolution.[52] The proof required to modify is set forth in the statute.[53]

316. The party who seeks a modification of child support has the burden of proving, by a preponderance of the evidence, that there has been a substantial change of circumstances justifying modification. [54] The change must be significant, material, involuntary and permanent.[55]

52 Florida Statutes § 63.172(1)(a); Kranz v. Kranz, 661 So. 2d 876, 877 (Fla. 3d DCA 1995). See also Florida Statutes § 61.14(1) and Frizzell v. Bartley, 372 So. 2d 1371, 1372 (Fla. 1979) and Wood v. Wood, 272 So. 2d 14 (Fla. 3d DCA 1973).

53 Florida Statutes § 61.14(7) and Montanie v. Montanie, 627 So. 2d 554, 555 (Fla. 4th DCA 1993). Note: Postjudgment agreements between parents that modify a child support order ordinarily are not enforceable if they limit child support in any way, but it is likely to be favorably regarded by a court if it provides increased support or protects the child's best interests. See, for example, Shellmyer v. Shellmyer, 418 So. 2d 477, 478 n.2 (Fla. 4th DCA 1982) and Warrick v. Hender, 198 So. 2d 348, 351 (Fla. 4th DCA 1967).

54 Montanie, 627 So. 2d at 555.

55 Timing is everything. If the parent is seeking a temporary modification due to education/school, claiming that the child will benefit from that career advancement, and in fact the child will age out before the benefit of that education is realized, then that might not suffice to modify support

317. It is noted to both parties that begetting a child is not an involuntary act. Absent some special circumstance the siring or birthing of subsequent children will not justify a deviation from the guidelines. Gimeno v. Rivera, 153 So.3d 390 (Fla. 3d DCA 2015).

ATTORNEY FEES/COSTS

318. The entitlement to attorney fees in a dissolution of marriage action is found in Florida Statutes § 61.16(1). Determination of entitlement is a discretionary award that will only be reversed upon a finding of abuse.[56]

319. The goal of the attorney fee statute is not to "make litigation free," but to make it accessible, so if the requesting party has access to an attorney payable from his or her own resources or the other party has not ability to pay, then the purpose of the statute is moot.[57]

320. Each party paid for fees for his/her respective attorneys.

a. Mr. Trask testified he paid $8,000.00
b. Ms. Trask testified she paid $6,360.00 to her former attorney and an additional $2,500.00 to her current counsel.[58]
c. Each party testified they incurred debt, either by loan or credit, in so doing.

321. The attorney fee statute is not intended to guarantee right to counsel of an equal caliber to the opposing party.[59] As a general rule, when marital property has been distributed and the parties incomes have been equalized through an alimony award, the trial court abuses discretion in awarding fees.[60]

322. Even those matters where fees/costs are sought as related to "behavior in litigation" (i.e. Rosen sanctions) must consider, with rare exception, the need/ability criteria.[61] This case, it is noted, is not a Rosen case.

323. The Court finds that given the overall financial status of the parties as discussed above, entitlement to attorney fee contribution to either party is DENIED.

RETENTION OF JURISDICTION

324. For ease of processing the IWO, the summation of the support awards above is as follows:

a. Beginning August 1, 2020, the Obligor JEREMY TRASK shall pay $600.00 per month durational alimony support to the Obligee KEARIE TRASK by and for durational alimony support, which will continue until August 1, 2023.

56 Stoler v. Stoler, 679 So.2d 837 (Fla. 2d DCA 1996).
57 Balko v. Balko, 957 So.2d 15 (Fla. 2d DCA 2007); Lewis v. Lewis, 485 So.2d 855 (Fla. 2d DCA 1986).
58 For the record, Ms. Bernard's flat rate is exceedingly fair and reasonable given her usual hourly rate, and the work she testified to putting on this case.
59 As noted in Bauchman v Bauchman, 253 So.3d 1143 (Fla. 4th DCA 2018), "this factor is not a basis for an award of attorney fees . . . neither the statute nor the case law require that both parties have legal counsel of equal experience or ability; nor is an impecunious spouse entitled to retain legal counsel charging legal fees comparable to those of the [other] attorney."
60 Hanson v Hanson, 217 So.3d. 1165 (Fla. 2d DCA 2017).
61 See Edgar v Firuta, 165 So.3d 758, 762 (Fla. 3d DCA 2015), stating, "any fee or cost award shall address the parties' need and ability to pay and detail the amount of time, the service provided, and the hourly rate being awarded" (emphasis added, citations omitted).

b. As of August 1, 2020, the Obligor JEREMY TRASK owes $7,350.00 in temporary alimony arrears to the Obligee KEARIE TRASK, which he shall pay by monthly installment of $50.00 per month (beginning August 1, 2020) and continue each month thereafter until such time as the alimony arrears balance is paid in full.

c. Beginning August 1, 2020, the Obligor JEREMY TRASK shall pay $312.76 per month in child support to the Obligee KEARIE TRASK by and for prospective child support for their two minor children, which will continue until August 1, 2023.

d. Beginning September 1, 2023, the Obligor JEREMY TRASK shall pay $555.09 per month in child support to the Obligee KEARIE TRASK by and for prospective child support for their two minor children, which will continue until the eldest ages out (or otherwise modified by the court).

e. When the eldest ages out, the step down will be $382.39 per month for one minor child, which will continue until that child ages out.

f. As of August 1, 2020, the Obligor JEREMY TRASK owes $4,367.79 in child support arrears to the Obligee KEARIE TRASK, which he shall pay by monthly installment of $50.00 per month beginning August 1, 2020 and continuing each month thereafter until such time as the child support arrears balance is paid in full.

g. The Obligor JEREMY TRASK shall be responsible for the $5.25 per installment processing fee due to the SDU.

h. The initial payment by IWO (i.e. during the durational alimony period) can be broken down for processing as follows:

Alimony	$600.00
Alimony arrears payment	$50.00
Child Support (during alimony)	$312.76
Child Support arrears payment	$50.00
MONTHLY TOTAL	$1,012.76
Installment Schedule (includes $5.25 processing)
Paid Monthly	$1,018.01
Paid Twice Monthly	$511.63
Paid Bi-Weekly	$472.68
Paid Weekly	$238.96

325. Counsel for Ms. Trask, the Obligee, is tasked with preparation of the Income Withholding Order, which will be presented to the trial judge within ten (10) days of the Final Judgment.

326. The Court should RETAIN JURISDICTION over the parties and minor children for the purpose of enforcement or modification of the parenting plan or child support, entry of any necessary QDRO order for distribution, and enforcement or modification of alimony (where legally appropriate, depending upon the nature of the award).

327. All other issues not addressed herein should be considered resolved and thereby DISPOSED by the Final Judgment.
